Court Officer Assigned Two-County Area

Ward Ashby Dean, for nearly 17 years a state probation and parole officer in the Lynchburg district, has been assigned to a new area—Bedford and Franklin counties— and expects to transfer when a replacement has been appointed and trained for the vacancy.

The Lynchburg district includes the counties of Amherst, Appomattox, Buckingham, Cumberland and Nelson and also the City of Lynchburg, according to R. E. Jordan, of Lynchburg, chief probation and parole officer for the district.

Dean, 46, whose home is in Bedford, has been serving the counties of Appomattox, Buckingham and Cumberland and the City of Lynchburg in his official duties with the Circuit Courts and Parole Board.

Applications to fill the vacancy created by Dean's transfer are being received by Chief Probation and Parole Officer Jordan at the Old Courthouse on Court Street.

Dean expects to remain on until his replacement has been selected and appointed, Jordan said. Dean will assist with the training of the new officer.

The new probation and parole officer must be approved by the judges of the courts of record within the area embraced by the Lynchburg District.

These judges are Judge C. G. Quesenberry for Amherst and Nelson counties, Judge Cundiff for the City of Lynchburg, Judge George Abbitt, Jr., for Appomattox, Buckingham and Cumberlan dcounties, and Judge Sweeney for Campbell and Bedford counties.

Jordan explained that the volume of cases has gown steadily in Bedford and Franklin counties in recent years, necessating the addition of another officer to work with the Circuit Courts in those two counties.

Dean is a Lynchburg College graduate who was a student at VPI before World War II. During the war he was an Army captain, serving four years and six months in tank destroyer forces.

Dean taught school for a time at Huddleston, in Bedford County. He is married to the former Mary Burks of Bedford.
